That Gas-Well Up in Hancock County, West Virginia. [From the Courier.] Last Saturday, whilst in New Cumberland, we visited the Fire-Brick Works of Messrs. Smith, Porter & Co., known as the Clifton Works, and through the politeness of James Porter, Esq., were shown the true inwardness of the brick business as seen by gaslight. The gentlemen composthe above firm, with their well known go-aheadiveness, have arranged the Clifton Works so that almost the is done with gas. They have laid pipes

whole process of manufacturing brick from the gas-well, at the mouth of Deep-Gut run, a distance of 2,200 feet, to the above-named establishment, and, besides running their machinery by gas, they also dry and burn the brick with it. The first kiln was started up last Wednesday; and kiln was started up last Wednesday; and at the time we were there it was still burning, and, as Mr. Porter informed us, with every indication of marked success. gas is brought directly from the well, a portion of the way through three-inch and the part next the works through four-inch pipe. The gas comes from the well with sufficient force to earry it any required distance, and Mr. Porter states that it is much better than passing through a gasometer, as it is perfectly dry and not so liable to cause the bursting of the pipes. The gas is intro-duced into the kilns by a pipe about a foot long and an inch and a half in diameter, one at each arch, and the amount of heat desired is gauged by what is called a globe valve. The main pipe extends entirely around the kiln and the short pipes extend through an orifice immediately in front of each arch. The pipes running un-der the floor of the dry-house are only an inch in diameter, but afford sufficient heat for drying purposes. The gas is introduced under the boilers in the engine-room by a pipe extending the whole width of the furnace, which is perforated with two rows of holes, some an inch and others an eighth of an inch apart, and one match will set things to boiling in less time than you can say s'cat. We congratulate our friends Smith, Porter & Co. in their grand achievement, and predict that in a very short period cord-wood and coal will be unknown in a brick-yard. When the entire works are in operation the whole supply of gas is consumed, but when not working, a wastepipe, which will be fifty feet high, erected on the bank of the river, will carry off the gas, and also furnish a grand light to the residents along the river.

SLIGHTLY MISSED IT .- A young woman on west Adams street read some time ago of the cutting courtesy with which a Duchess once silenced a presumptuous ever offered for sale at auction in this city. The youth who was about to light a cigar in her august presence. "Is smoking disagreeable to you, madam?" said the p. y. "I do not know, sir; no one has ever smoked in my presence," answered the haughty dame. "That'll be a bully good thing to say some day," said the young woman to together with a general and well-selected assortment herself; and last week she got a chance to of other rare and beautiful Blooming-Plants. ring it in on a gentleman who said to her: "I beg your pardon-is smoking distasteful to you?" "I do not know," she said, with ineffable stateliness, "no one ever asked me before."-Chicago Tribune.

The intense excitement of the populace in Paris just before the late elections caused a political demonstration even in the Theatre Français. It was a one-act drama called "La Joie Fait Peur," written without thought of politics, by F. E. de Girardin, that brought on the demonstration. The drama is about a mother who is informed that her only son is dead. Sympathizing this most be tall her that her only son is dead. Sympathizing friends tell her that the news may not be true. She replies that she read the notice true. She replies that she read the notice of her son's death in an official Government report, and that the Government would not issue what was untrue. After she has repeated this remark several times the simpleton of the play retorts: "But the Government may deceive itself." No sooner had the actor pronounced these words than an old gentleman in the parquet loudly cried out, "Very true." In another second the entire audience was upon its fect, and shouted out its assent to the old gentleman's remark with such a flood of cheering that remark with such a flood of cheering that the play had to be stopped for a few mo-

Of Mr. Tennyson, whose personal appearance is somewhat Byronic, a story is told which would be good if it were certainly true. He is said to have been staying with a friend in Paris, and one day asked his companion, who was going out, to tell the porter at the lodge to keep the fire in. His friend's French, however, was of a mediocre quality as regards pronunciation, so that his orders to the porter assumed the form of Ne laissez pas sortir le fou! enunciated with much demonstrative gesticulation. When Tennyson, soon after, wanted to go out, he found the door of his room guarded by two stalwart men, who refused to let him pass. The wilder Tennyson grew, of course the more the men were grey of course the more the men were special commissioner.

It all farmers are as cautious as this one near Newport, R. I., the spring-bed and lightning-rod men won't find any dupes on a second visit. A short time since, after he had been paid a check for a hundred dollars, he presented it at the bank for payment. He was told it would be necessary for him to endorse his name on the back of the check before receiving the money. "No you don't," he exclaimed; "you don't get me to endorse anything; I've got caught that way before." It was explained to him that this was a rule of all banks; that where a check was made to a man's order it was necessary for him to endorse it before re-ceiving the money. "I can't help that," said the still obdurate customer; "I've vowed never to endorse another thing, and I won't." All arguments were lost on him, and it finally resulted in his returning the check to the maker of it and receiving the cash from him.

"Are you really happy? and wouldn't you like to be a bachelor again?" asked a Newark bachelor the other day of a married friend, who espoused a beautiful girl only a year ago. "Happy!" echoed the benedict; "Happy! Why, of course I'm happy, and I wouldn't change back again for all the world. But I say, Fred., let me give you another piece of advice: Don't be a blasted fool and get married. You hear me?"—Exchange.

An exquisite, leading a dog by a string, lounged up to the ticket-office window of a railway station last week and inquired: "Must I-aw-take a ticket for a puppy?" He was naturally both surprised and annoyed when the ticket-seller answered, in a slightly bewildered tone, after a moment's reflection, "No, you can travel as an ordimary passenger."

We never saw such sudden and inconsolable grief as was exhibited in the market this morning by a man who pawed over a whole box of Hi. Kleinhan's bull-peppers to pick out half a dozen, and then undertook to rub a speck out of his right eye. If he had lost a drove of rich uncles he couldn't have carried on worse.—Easton Free Press.

DESIRABLE, CONVENIENT, AND WELL-CONSTRUCTED, FIRST-CLASS FRANKLIN-STREET RESIDENCE, CORNER OF SHAFER STREET, FOR SALE AT PUBLIC AUCTION.—By request of the owner, Rev. A. E. Dickinson (who has purchased the residence of the Rev. James B. Taylor opposite), I will sell upon the premises, at public auction, on THURSDAY the 25th day of October, 1877, at 4½ o'clock P. M., the above-described truly valuable and convenient FRAME RESIDENCE. The main house is two-and-a-half stories high, and contains ten rooms; with gas, water, and the usual conveniences in a dwelling of this class, and is comparatively new, having been built about six years. The kitchen is detached, and contains four rooms, &c. The parlors have large bay-windows, and are fitted up with fine chandellers and marble mantels. This residence is situated in a most excellent neighborhood—second to none in the city, peside being so near to Monroe Park. The street-cars run within a short distance of the door and afford constant communication with the business portion of the city. This is certainly one of the few desirable dwellings now for sale, and being on the proposed extended Franklin avenue is bound to greatly increase its value. The lot has a front of 50 feet on Franklin street, and runs back 150 feet on Shafer street to a wide alley.

TERMS: One fourth cash: residue upon a credit wide alley.

TERMS: One fourth cash; residue upon a credit of six, twelve, eighteen, and twenty-four months, the purchaser to give negotiable notes, with legal interest added from the day of sale, and to be secured by a trust-deed.
